Some festivals in Britain are centuries old. Others are not so old but no less popular. Many British people think that royal traditions are very important. The queen is the only person in the country who has two birthdays. Queen Elizabeth was born on 21 April. It is her real birthday. But she has an official birthday that is celebrated on the second Saturday in June. The official holiday was introduced by King George IV in the nineteenth century. Now the day is famous for the traditional ceremony the Trooping of the Colour and a big parade of the royal horse guard. Thousands of Londoners and visitors watch the parade and millions of people at home watch it on TV.

Rugby is a form of football, which was started in 1823. Then the pupil of Rugby School William Webb Ellis handled a ball and ran with it during a game of football. The first set of rules was set out in 1845. Since that time rugby has been played all over Britain. The standard game (Rugby Union) has been played by teams of 15. Rugby League is a different form of the game. There are 13 players and slightly different rules. The first international game was played in 1870. The Five Nations Cup was organised in the period between 1910 and 1999. Teams from England, France, Ireland, Scotland and Wales took part in it. In 2000, Italy joined the championship and now it is called the Six Nations Cup.
